Professor Sir Ian Gilmore

President, Royal College of Physicians.
Consultant Physician and Gastroenterologist,
Royal Liverpool University Hospital, United Kingdom

'Alcohol - The UK's Increasingly Problematic Relationship with its Favourite Drug'

Professor Sir Ian Gilmore is the President of the Royal College of Physicians. He is a Consultant Physician and Gastroenterologist at the Royal Liverpool University Hospital and Honorary Professor at the Department of Medicine, University of Liverpool. His specialty interest is liver disease.

He was previously Registrar of the College and a member of Council. He chaired a Working Party in 2001, producing the report Alcohol – can the NHS afford it? A blueprint for a coherent alcohol strategy.

Professor Sir Ian Gilmore continues to chair the Alcohol Committee and now also chairs the Alcohol Health Alliance in which relevant agencies work together in a coherent and focussed framework. He is Chair of the European Alcohol and Health Forum Science Group and is a member of the Climate and Health Council.

He is currently a Commissioner for Sir Michael Marmot's review of the social determinants of health in the UK and a member of the National Quality Board. He has lectured extensively overseas and has had particularly fruitful clinical and research collaborations with colleagues in the USA.
