Master Class

Hosted by the Centre for Housing, Urban and Regional Planning (CHURP)

Dr Sue Brownill is a Reader in Urban Policy and Governance, Department of Planning, Oxford Brookes University whose research and teaching interests focus on the interaction of communities with urban planning and regeneration. She is also the Postgraduate Research Tutor for the department with responsibilities for leading the PhD programme and co-ordinating and delivering doctoral research methods training. Sue combines her academic interests with involvement with community and housing groups. She has been a board member of Oxford Citizens Housing Association since 2003 and before moving to Oxford worked with community organisations in London’s Docklands.

Dr Jenny Muir is Lecturer in the School of Planning, Architecture and Civil Engineering at Queen’s University Belfast. She was previously Lecturer in Housing Studies in the Department of Urban Studies at the University of Glasgow. Before working as an academic, Jenny’s research interests include urban regeneration, housing policy and practice, and the state, governance and urban change. Current research projects include waterfront development in Belfast, Dublin, Cardiff and Liverpool; Northern Ireland’s housing associations; and the impact of economic change on neighbourhoods in Northern Ireland. Jenny is Programme Director for the MSc in Spatial Regeneration and lectures in urban regeneration, housing and property development.

Undertaking Qualitative Field Work:
opportunities and challenges

Thursday 13 September, 2012
10.30 – 12.00 Room 529 Napier

RSVP for catering purposes ryan.cortazzo@adelaide.edu.au

Further Information
Ph: (08) 8313 3304
Email:churp@adelaide.edu.au

http://www.adelaide.edu.au/churp/