Call for Papers

The Education Research Group Adelaide (ERGA) journal, ergo, is designed to promote the development of university teaching and learning. The journal is particularly interested in publishing “works in progress”.

The journal is published on an ongoing basis and is supported by the Centre for Learning and Professional Development at the University of Adelaide. The deadlines for submissions are 20 May, 20 August, and 20 October.

Following an initial assessment by the Editor, articles will be peer reviewed by at least two independent reviewers in compliance with DEEWR requirements.

Editorial Policy

ergo accepts papers in all fields of university teaching and learning. The journal aims to provide a forum for publication of short high quality research papers across the entire range of the discipline including, but not limited to, novel teaching methods, student assessment, the evaluation of learning and teaching, the application of new technologies to teaching, student characteristics and their influence on teaching and learning, and case studies. The journal is particularly aimed at researchers who have preliminary findings – hence the interest in publishing works in progress.

Extended papers, or those whose primary focus is not learning and teaching should be submitted to other journals. We strongly encourage papers that are interdisciplinary and that deal with novel methods that are immediately applicable to enhanced teaching and learning. The primary criteria for acceptance of papers is that the research is of high quality, novel, significant, and clearly of interest to a national and international audience.

- Based on the recommendations of the reviewers, the editors then decide whether the particular article should be accepted as it is, revised or rejected.
