

Teaching undergraduate students how to evaluate (their) research: The torments of Google and Wikipedia

A web-based seminar hosted by ERGA

Dr John Willison

Centre for Learning and Professional Development
University of Adelaide

Dr Cally Guerin

Adelaide Graduate Centre
University of Adelaide

Are you frustrated by student use of Google and Wikipedia?

Are you looking for ways to improve student ability to evaluate research processes and products?

Do you want to begin a broader discussion around how to develop student research skills at undergraduate or Masters by Coursework level?

Join an intellectually-stimulating online discussion of ways to promote students' skill quality evaluation skills – of their own and others' research.

Date: Thursday 12 November 2009

Time: 9.30-10.30 am

Venue: Online (web address will be sent to registrants before the event)

Numbers: 20 participants maximum.

Preparation: We will provide the weblink and information on how to participate in the webinar a few days before the event, and run a brief training session on Wednesday 11 November. You may also like to check out the Research Skill Development website at <http://www.adelaide.edu.au/clpd/rsd>.

Equipment: Computer with Internet connection, headset with microphone and headphones.

RSVP: 9 November 2009 (no late registrations accepted)

Contact: Kerrie Le Lievre on (830)3 6923 or at kerrie.lielievre@adelaide.edu.au.