

FACULTY OF THE PROFESSIONS GRADUATE ATTRIBUTES 2007

Master of Educational Studies

- 1) A capacity to examine education-related studies and draw conclusions for everyday practice
- 2) The ability to integrate research findings from a number of disciplines such as psychology, sociology, measurement, history, and studies of curriculum in various subject areas
- 3) A capacity to write essays on education-related topics, that are both clear and demonstrate a high level of understanding
- 4) The ability to examine educational issues in group settings
- 5) The capacity to begin the planning of a research study on an education-related topic
- 6) The ability to apply education research in an international context
- 7) An understanding of the importance of continuous learning
- 8) The capacity to share and collaborate with fellow students, and an awareness and expertise in the collaborative practices of teachers with each other and with the broader educational community
- 9) An understanding of the highest standards of endeavour in teaching and student learning and the ability to take a leadership role in the educational community
- 10) The capacity to work in teams