IBP-R

Integrated Bridging Program - Research

IBP-R Objectives

RED

The Integrated Bridging Program - Research is a research communication program for international postgraduate research students

The program aims to make explicit the specific discipline-related expectations of academic writing and oral presentation. Particular goals of the program are to

- provide induction into the academic, linguistic and cultural conventions relating to postgraduate research in the students' own disciplines and paradigms;
- foster students' agency and autonomy in negotiating research and language outcomes;
- develop independent communication skills and proficiency in English appropriate to the students' own area of specialisation;
- develop techniques of citing and attribution to express critical perspective;
- develop spoken English and presentation skills for communicating research; and
- develop sentence-level English grammar and self-editing skills.

Options within the IBP-R

RED

On arrival, each international research student talks with IBP-R staff and their supervisor/s about the most effective option for them. The outcome could be any of the following:

- Full participation in the IBP-R in the first full semester of candidature;
- Full IBP Participants should attend the Induction and at least 8 other sessions of their choice
- Negotiated participation in the IBP-R as negotiated between the student, their supervisor/s and the IBP-R staff
- Exemption from any participation in the IBP-R
