Thesis confidentiality and embargo:

If you have an approved embargo on your thesis your examiners will be informed of the embargo and that the material in the thesis should be treated as confidential and not discussed with, or made available to, any other party, except when permitted, in writing, to do so by the University. If you require an embargo and have not yet applied for one please submit an Embargo Application prior to the submission of your thesis for examination: <https://www.adelaide.edu.au/graduate-research/current-students/forms#embargo>

Appointment of potential examiners

☐ I have no objection to the appointment of any particular examiner, OR

☐ I object to the appointment of a particular examiner(s) and I enclose a statement detailing my objection.

Please note that your objection does not serve as a veto. If, on academic grounds, your School wishes to recommend the appointment of a particular examiner to whom you have objected, it can make a case to Dean of Graduate Studies for the appointment to proceed.

In some rare and exceptional circumstances where an embargo, as described above, is not adequate and greater confidentiality of the material in the thesis is required, examiners can be asked to sign a legal confidentiality deed. This would be required in less than 5% of all examinations. Examples include work that will be patented, research relating to national or defence security, or where there is a contract in place for the research or scholarship which has special conditions for the examination.

Is a legal confidentiality deed signed by all examiners required for this examination?:

☐ Yes

☐ No
