IMPLEMENTATION

Aim
To prescribe the responsibilities and actions required for the prevention and response to workplace bullying and harassment on University premises and/or during University-related activities, to ensure the University meets the requirements of the Health, Safety and Wellbeing (HSW) Policy and the relevant sections of the Work Health and Safety (WHS) Act 2012 (SA), Code of Conduct, and the Fair Work Act 2009 (Commonwealth).

3.35.1 Objectives

3.35.1.1 To prevent and manage the risk of workplace bullying and harassment by ensuring that:
- workers are informed during their induction upon commencement that bullying and harassment will not be tolerated and of this process;
- information is available to assist workers in identifying and responding to bullying and harassment;
- workers have access to relevant training, reporting procedures and support; and
- workers have support and access to a trained Fair Treatment Contact Officer (FTCO) network.

3.35.1.2 To ensure that all concerns about bullying and harassing behaviour are acknowledged and mediated informally where possible; or where this is either not possible or appropriate, managed in accordance with the University Behaviour and Conduct Policy.

3.35.2 Scope

3.35.2.1 Inclusions
This applies to all persons who undertake University of Adelaide related activities and/or are employed or engaged by the University or affiliated with the University in any capacity as a worker or an officer as defined under the WHS Act 2012 (SA). This includes but is not limited to employees, title holders and volunteers, visitors or third parties engaged by the University, under a contract of service or contract for service (e.g. contractors, sub-contracts and employees of a labour hire company placed in the University).

3.35.2.2 Exclusions
- Where a concern is raised by a student, about a staff member or another student, students should refer to the Student Grievance Resolution Process.
- Individuals who are no longer workers (ex-workers) or are members of the general public may lodge a complaint. Such complaints are managed separately to the processes referred to in this chapter and are outside of the provisions of the Enterprise Agreement. It is important to note that the University takes all complaints seriously and manages them as appropriate to the circumstances.

3.35.7 Definitions
(For further information please refer to the Preventing and responding to workplace bullying and harassment Information Sheet.)

Fair Treatment Contact Officer (FTCO)
The FTCO is available to assist staff with enquiries related to workplace bullying and harassment. They are not the investigator of the incident or an advocate for the person who believes they have been subject to or exposed to workplace bullying and harassment behaviour.

The role includes:
- provision of information to all worker(s), including Managers/Supervisors, about the University's workplace bullying and harassment process;
- where to access support or advice; (both internal and external e.g. Human Resources, the Fair Work Tribunal, HR Equal Opportunity Commission) for grievances including those which sit outside of the workplace bullying and harassment process;
- provision of information to help the worker(s) decide if the behaviour meets the criteria of workplace bullying and harassment, and then for the worker(s) to make a decision as to whether they will proceed with an allegation of bullying and harassment;
- notifying the Associate Director, HSW (or delegate) via email, if the staff member has confirmed they wish to progress their concern i.e. to informal mediation or to lodge a formal complaint.

Workplace bullying
Workplace bullying is a term that describes a wide range of behaviours that may harm, intimidate, isolate or undermine people at work. The legal definition is given by section 789FD (1) of the Fair Work Act (2009) which states that

A worker is bullied at work if:
(i) an individual; or
(ii) a group of individuals;
repeatedly behaves unreasonably towards the worker, or a group of workers of which the worker is a member; and that behaviour creates a risk to health and safety.
3.35.7 Definitions (Continued)

Examples include:
- Abusive, insulting or offensive language or comments
- Unjustified criticism or complaints
- Continuously and deliberately excluding someone from workplace activities
- Withholding information that is vital for effective work performance
- Setting unreasonable timelines or constantly changing deadlines
- Setting tasks that are unreasonably below or beyond a person’s skill level
- Denying access to information, supervision, consultation or resources such that it is detrimental to the worker
- Spreading misinformation or malicious rumours
- Changing work arrangements, such as rosters and leave, to deliberately inconvenience a particular worker or workers
- Excessive scrutiny at work.

A single incident of unreasonable behaviour is not considered to be workplace bullying, however it may have the potential to escalate and should not be ignored.

For further information refer to the University Behaviour and Conduct Policy.

What is not considered to be workplace bullying

The law also defines what cannot be considered workplace bullying. It states that a worker is not bullied at work if subject to reasonable management action carried out in a reasonable manner (s789FD(2) Fair Work Act (2009). There are times where the University may take reasonable management action to effectively direct and control the way work is carried out. It is reasonable for Managers and Supervisors to allocate work and to give fair and reasonable feedback on a worker’s performance. These actions cannot be considered to be bullying if carried out in a reasonable manner, taking the particular circumstances into account. Examples of reasonable management action include:
- Setting reasonable performance goals, standards and deadlines
- Rostering and allocating working hours where the requirements are reasonable
- Transferring a worker (location or reporting lines) for operational reasons
- Deciding not to select a worker for promotion where a reasonable process is followed and documented
- Informing a worker about unsatisfactory work performance, when undertaken in a reasonable manner
- Informing a worker about inappropriate behaviour in an objective and confidential way
- Implementing organisational changes or restructuring
- Disciplinary action and/or termination of employment undertaken in accordance with the University policies, procedures and the Enterprise Agreement.

Discrimination and harassment

Discrimination and harassment occurs when someone is treated less favourably than others because they have a particular characteristic or belong to a particular group of people.

For example, discrimination and harassment can occur on grounds of
- Age
- Parental or carer status
- Disability
- Gender identity
- Industrial activity
- Marital status
- Identity of Spouse
- Political belief or activity
- Physical features
- Race
- Religious belief or activity
- Sex or sexuality
- Pregnancy or breastfeeding

Continued
3.35.7 Definitions

Discrimination and harassment (Continued)
Sexual harassment is also associated with unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favours or other unwelcome conduct of a sexual nature.

Discrimination and sexual harassment in employment is unlawful under anti-discrimination, equal employment opportunity, workplace relations and human rights laws. It is possible for a person to be bullied, sexually harassed and discriminated against at the same time.

Similarities and differences between bullying and harassment
The common features of workplace bullying and harassment are:
- they offend, humiliate and intimidate;
- they are unwarranted, unreasonable and unnecessary behaviours;
- they create a working environment that people find hostile and psychologically unsafe;
- they may be protected, hidden or accepted within a workplace culture;
- they are often enacted in private or in covert ways that are difficult to prove.

The differences are that
- workplace bullying is more likely to be and must be repetitive behaviour whereas harassment can be one-off behaviour that offends;
- workplace bullying is more likely to be deliberate and intentional whereas harassment may be unintended;
- workplace bullying does not necessarily focus on an aspect of the individual/target whereas harassment focuses on an aspect such as race, sex or gender etc.

Workplace conflict
Differences of opinion and disagreements are generally not considered to be workplace bullying and harassment. People can have differences and disagreements in the workplace without engaging in repeated, unreasonable behaviour that creates a risk to health and safety. However, in some cases conflict that is not managed may escalate to the point where it meets the definition of workplace bullying and harassment.

Repeated behaviour
Persistent nature of the behaviour and can involve a range of behaviours over time.

Unreasonable behaviour
Behaviour that a reasonable person, having regard for the circumstances, would see as unreasonable, including behaviour that is victimising, humiliating, intimidating or threatening.

Worker
A person is a worker if the person carried out work in any capacity for the University including work as:
- An employee; or
- A contractor, subcontractor or an employee of a contractor or subcontractor; or
- An employee of a labour hire company who has been assigned to work in the University; or
- An outworker; or
- An apprentice or trainee; or
- A person gaining work experience; or
- A volunteer.

3.35.8 Performance Measures
HR Branch will use performance measures to assist in identifying areas of success and/or where corrective action is required to meet the objectives and targets of this process.

The level of compliance with the chapter and effectiveness will be determined during the internal audit process.

PROCEDURES TO RESPOND TO COMPLAINTS OF WORKPLACE BULLYING AND HARASSMENT AT THE UNIVERSITY OF ADELAIDE

APPENDIX A

Stage 1
Concerns about bullying & harassment

Workers who believe they may have been exposed to workplace bullying & harassment should refer to the definitions section 3.35.7 and seek advice and assistance from their Manager/Supervisor or a Fair Treatment Contact Officer (FTCO).

If following the information received the worker(s) wish to raise their concerns with the University, they should approach their Manager/Supervisor or the Associate Director, HSW, who will clarify the concerns and then provide options to the worker(s).

OPTIONS
- If the worker wishes to resolve their concerns via HR supported mediation, move to stage 2 (For Manager/Supervisor supported mediation refer to section 2 Informal Resolution of the Staff Complaints Information Sheet.)
- If the worker wishes to formalise their complaint, then move to Stage 4.
- If the worker chooses to withdraw from the process, then no further action is required.

Stage 2
Steps to mediation

The person perceived to have engaged in bullying & harassment is notified at this point.

HR will support a process to summarise the workers concerns and provide an opportunity for a response.

Both parties will be provided a copy of the summary of concerns prior to mediation.

If both parties agree to resolve their concerns via mediation.

Move to Stage 3.

If at any stage it becomes clear that completion of mediation will not be possible and the worker wishes to proceed with a complaint

Move to Stage 4.

Stage 3
Mediation

HR Advisory Team, in consultation with both parties, shall appoint an independent and trained mediator.

The aim of mediation will be to document a specific agreement between both parties on the behaviour they will demonstrate towards each other in the future.

If the mediation does not result in agreement by both parties, the worker may elect to resolve the matter by making a complaint.

Move to Stage 4 (as applicable).

Stage 4
Formal resolution

If the allegation is against a staff member the allegation is processed in accordance with the formal resolution procedures of the Staff Complaints Procedure and Information Sheet and/or the misconduct/serious misconduct provisions of the Enterprise Agreement.

If the allegation is against a contractor, the allegation is processed in accordance with the procedures advised by the Contractor’s Manager and in liaison with the relevant University representative(s).

If the outcome of the formal resolution process is that there was not sufficient evidence to substantiate that bullying & harassment took place

Stage 3 mediation will be offered, if the parties are willing, in an attempt to secure a resolution.

Note: Appeal rights only exist where provided by the Enterprise Agreement.

Withdrawal of a complaint can be made at any time during the complaint resolution process

NOTE: Students are excluded from this process. They should refer to the Student Grievance Resolution Process.
