Can I work while I am studying and in receipt of the scholarship?

The University is unable to provide advice regarding this. It is up to each recipient to be familiar with the terms and conditions of their visa and also any benefits (i.e. Centrelink) that they may receive. It is strongly suggested that you seek advice on this prior to applying for university.

If your visa and benefit payments will not be affected by studying and working then most students are able to balance work and study. Most university classes are scheduled between 9am - 5pm from Monday to Friday, so many students seek work in the evenings and on weekends. When studying full-time, students are usually required to attend approximately 12 hours of classes per week, but you need to allow additional time to prepare for classes, researching, doing homework and writing assignments. It is not only important to let your employer know that you may need time off during examination periods, but also that you may be able to work additional hours during university holidays.

Will the scholarship affect my Centrelink payments?

The University is unable to provide advice regarding this. It is up to each recipient to be familiar with the terms and conditions of any benefits (i.e. Centrelink) that they may receive. In our experience, some students are no longer eligible to receive their Special Benefits payment. It is strongly suggested that you seek advice on this prior to applying for university.

Will the scholarship be offered in Semester 2, 2021?

No, it is anticipated that all available scholarships will be offered in Semester 1.
